ANNIE STOKES
CHARM CITY JUNCTION

Friday, October 6 at 8 p.m.

In this double bill performance, Indie-folk musician and Virginia native Annie Stokes and her band fuse city sounds and country soul with a rootsy and authentic feel. Baltimore's Charm City Junction puts a new spin on old-timey music, carrying the torch of fast-picking bluegrass and toe-tapping Celtic music.

TEN STRINGS AND A GOATSKIN

Saturday, February 17 at 8 p.m.

Enjoy folk fusion performed by this acoustic trio from Prince Edward Island, who transform tradition with vigor, curiosity, and sparks of goofy humor. This mesmerizing concert of traditional and original music performed on violin, guitar, and percussion is infused with pop and world rhythms and inspired by the musicians' Atlantic Canadian histories and roots.

BEN HUNTER AND JOE SEAMONS

Thursday, November 9 at 8 p.m.

This Northwest musical duo shares a sense of joy in their interpretation of American roots and blues music. Their mission to "spread the glory and whimsy of traditional song," shines through in a concert of field hollers, fiddle and banjo breakdowns, and early jazz.

FRANK SOLIVAN AND DIRTY KITCHEN

Friday, April 20 at 8 p.m.

This Grammy-nominated band of progressive bluegrass pioneers explores new sounds and concepts rooted in tradition. Performing on the mandolin, banjo, guitar, and bass, this band has earned an IBMA (International Bluegrass Music Association) award and four nominations. Their unique blend of instrumental, vocal, and songwriting talent is shifting the bluegrass paradigm.
